

RSSKYLER LIMO

Brand Guidelines

The complete reference for identity, voice & visual expression across New York City

How to use this guide

This document brings together, refines, and extends the RSSkyler Limo identity system first drafted across the brand's guideline, visual-applications, and deliverables-summary files. It is organised as twelve chapters — read start to finish as an onboarding reference, or open directly to the chapter you need as a working specification.

Two visual devices recur throughout. A grey, italic rationale note explains the thinking the brand's original documents already established for a decision. A gold-edged enhancement note marks a recommendation added in this edition — new territory the brand can consider claiming next. Nothing in an enhancement box overrides the standing guidance around it; treat it as a proposal for review, not an already-approved rule.

Source note

This edition consolidates and lightly extends the existing Brand Guidelines and Deliverables Summary documents, and folds in the Visual Applications Guide in full (Chapter 9). Chapter 12 is new: a set of business-level recommendations for the RSSkyler team to evaluate.

+ A note on this edition

The logo system that previously sat in this guide has been removed at the team's request while the mark itself is still being finalised. Every other chapter here — palette, type, voice, fleet, digital, physical applications, templates, governance — stands on its own and doesn't depend on a specific logo file. Once a final mark is locked, a Logo System & Usage chapter can be reinstated without touching anything else in this document.

01

Brand Overview & Strategy

Mission, vision, values, audience & positioning

Brand Overview & Strategy

The foundation every other chapter builds on.

Mission

To make every journey between two points feel considered — private, punctual and genuinely welcoming — whether that’s a 6 a.m. run to JFK or a wedding motorcade through Brooklyn.

Vision

To be the first name that comes to mind for chauffeured travel in New York City — the trusted call for anyone who needs a car to simply be there, be right, and be discreet about it.

Core values

Punctuality as respect	On time is not a metric here — it is how the brand shows it values a client’s time as much as its own.
Discretion by default	Conversations, routes and client details stay in the car. Nothing is assumed to be shareable.
Craft in the details	A clean interior, a correct temperature, a driver who already knows the terminal — small things, done consistently.
Warm professionalism	Formal enough for a boardroom, human enough for a wedding morning.
One standard, every borough	Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Staten Island are run to the same bar — no borough gets the diluted version.

+ Recommended enhancement

An internal brand-kit draft for the company independently named three pillars — reliability, exclusivity, professionalism — that mostly confirm the values above (reliability maps to punctuality, professionalism to warm professionalism). Exclusivity is the one genuinely new word, and it's worth a deliberate decision rather than a silent addition: it sits in real tension with the “accessible luxury” positioning this whole guide is built around. If the brand wants to lean more exclusive, that's a legitimate direction — but it should be chosen on purpose, not layered on top of a positioning statement that promises the opposite.

Positioning statement

Position

RSSkyler Limo is New York City's accessible-luxury chauffeur service — the confidence of a five-star hotel car, without the velvet-rope distance.

“Accessible luxury” is the brand's central strategic bet: premium enough to satisfy a high-net-worth client's expectations, approachable enough that a first-time corporate booker never feels out of place calling. Every later decision in this guide — the warmth in the voice, the restraint in the gold accent, the plain-language app copy — is a downstream expression of this one bet.

Who we serve

Segment	What they need	What earns their trust
Business travellers	Reliable airport & point-to-point transfers, often booked by an assistant	Live tracking, flight-aware pickup, zero-friction billing
Diplomatic & executive clients	Discreet, chauffeur-led travel for consulates, missions and corporate leadership	Familiar drivers, verified vehicles, quiet consistency over time
Corporate accounts	A dependable fleet for staff and visiting executives	Monthly invoicing, SLAs, a single point of contact
Wedding & event hosts	Coordinated multi-vehicle logistics for a day that cannot slip	A dedicated planner, rehearsed timing, a calm on-site presence

What sets RSSkyler apart

Accessible luxury	Premium without intimidation — the positioning this entire system is built around.
-------------------	--

Tech + personal service	Modern booking and live tracking, delivered by a chauffeur who still remembers a returning client's preferences.
Local expertise, five boroughs	Genuine on-the-ground knowledge of New York City, not a one-size-fits-all template built for anywhere.
Authentic imagery	Real chauffeurs, real vehicles, real locations — never stock-photo luxury.
A dedicated wedding & events division	Its own packages, its own marketing voice, still unmistakably RSSkyler.
One system, every touchpoint	The same visual language, palette and voice from the app to the vehicle livery to the invoice.

+ Recommended enhancement

Consider naming three brand pillars for internal use — Punctual by design, Discreet by nature, Local at heart — as a short-form version of this chapter that chauffeurs and dispatch staff can actually memorise and apply on the road, distinct from the fuller voice characteristics in Chapter 4.

02

Color Palette

Five colours, one disciplined hierarchy

Color Palette

Midnight blue and gold, built for restraint rather than excess.

Core palette

Midnight Blue
#0B2142 · RGB 11, 33, 66
Primary · ~60% of any layout

Accent Gold “Golden Grass”
#D4A017 · RGB 212, 160, 23 · HSL 43°, 80%, 46%
Accent · ~10%, highlights & CTAs only

Charcoal
#2C2C2F · RGB 44, 44, 47
Secondary text & UI

Pure White
#FFFFFF
Background · ~30%, readability

Light Grey
#F5F5F5
Secondary backgrounds, panels

Why this palette

Midnight blue signals trust and professionalism without the coldness of black. Gold adds luxury in small, deliberate doses rather than ostentation. The 60/30/10 ratio between midnight, white and gold keeps every layout calm — gold stays a highlight, never a field colour.

Five colours is the entire palette, by design. Where a layout seems to need a sixth — a hairline, a disabled state, a hover tint — derive it as a tint or low-opacity tone of one of the five rather than introducing a new hue. Consistency compounds; a growing colour list quietly erodes it.

Accessibility & contrast

Measured against WCAG 2.1 — 4.5:1 minimum for body text, 3:1 for large text and UI components.

Combination	Ratio	Verdict
Midnight text on White	16.0 : 1	Passes AAA — safe for any text size

White text on Midnight	16.0 : 1	Passes AAA — safe for any text size
Charcoal text on White	13.9 : 1	Passes AAA — safe for any text size
Midnight text on Light Grey	14.7 : 1	Passes AAA — safe for any text size
Gold text on Midnight	6.8 : 1	Passes AA, close to AAA — safe for body and UI text
Gold text on White	2.4 : 1	Fails AA at every size — graphic use only

+ Recommended enhancement

Gold on white cannot carry text at any size and reads noticeably lower-contrast even in large graphic use. The original spec called for “gold background, white text” CTAs — white on gold measures a similarly weak ~1.9:1. Rebuild gold buttons as a gold fill with midnight text (9.9:1, passes AAA), or keep white text but move it onto a midnight or charcoal fill and use gold only for the border, icon or underline. Gold should generally appear as text only when it is sitting on midnight or charcoal — everywhere else, let it be a line, an icon, a small fill, or a large decorative numeral rather than a sentence.

Colour combinations

Primary surface

White text, gold reserved for icons & small accents

Light surface

Charcoal or midnight text, gold as border or icon only

03

Typography

A serif for heritage, a sans for the road ahead

Typography

Two typefaces, each doing one job well.

The system

Display & headlines

Fraunces

A warm display serif with real optical character — evokes heritage and craftsmanship without tipping into the stiffness of a strictly formal serif. Used for H1–H3, pull quotes, and rationale notes (set in italic).

Body & interface

Public Sans

A clean, humanist sans built for legibility at small sizes — body copy, UI labels, tables, invoices. Carries the brand's modern, digital-native side.

Why this pairing

Serif headlines evoke premium heritage — the same register as luxury hospitality and automotive brands. Sans-serif body keeps the app, invoices and booking flow easy to scan on a phone at a curb. Together they balance tradition with everyday usability.

Type scale

Role	Typeface / weight	Size
H1 — chapter / page title	Fraunces, Semibold	34–40px
H2 — section title	Fraunces, Semibold	22–26px
H3 — subsection	Public Sans, Semibold	16–18px
Body	Public Sans, Regular	15–16px / 1.65–1.7 line-height
UI label / caption	Public Sans, Medium	12–13px
Rationale / pull-quote	Fraunces, Italic	15–17px

In use

Arrive in Style

Premium Chauffeur Service in New York City

RSSkyler Limo provides seamless, luxurious and reliable chauffeured transportation. Book your ride in seconds and experience professional service with every journey.

Numerals

Use tabular (fixed-width) figures for anything set in a column or meant to be compared at a glance — pricing, invoices, flight times, itineraries. Public Sans' tabular figure set keeps digits aligned without the awkward jog of proportional numerals.

+ Recommended enhancement

Set a slightly larger minimum size for anything read at a glance from the curb or a moving vehicle — chauffeur greeting cards, door signage, the driver's in-app name display. Fraunces' fine serif detail is part of what makes it feel considered on a page; that same detail can soften under headlights or phone-screen glare at night, so treat 16px as the practical floor for anything meant to be read outdoors, not just the 15px screen minimum in the type scale above.

04

Brand Voice & Messaging

How RSSkyler sounds, in five words and a hundred

Brand Voice & Messaging

Confident enough for a boardroom, warm enough for a wedding morning.

Voice characteristics

Confident

States things plainly; never hedges on what the client can expect

Professional

Correct, considered, never sloppy

Welcoming

Speaks to a person, not an account number

Discreet

Says only what is needed; never performs privacy, just practises it

Efficient

Short sentences. No filler. Respects the reader's time in writing, too

Why this balance

The voice balances the formality high-net-worth clients expect with the approachability modern consumers demand — avoiding both the coldness of an overly formal luxury brand and the over-familiarity of a consumer app.

Cross-checked

A separate brand-kit draft named its tone as welcoming, polished and timely — a shorter list that maps cleanly onto the five above (welcoming matches directly; polished and timely echo professional and efficient). No changes needed here; it's a useful confirmation that the voice holds up from a different angle.

Messaging pillars

Effortless from the first tap Booking, tracking and billing should feel simpler than the trip itself.

Discreet excellence

The best compliment is a client who never had to think about the logistics at all.

Local mastery, five boroughs deep

Manhattan to JFK to a Brooklyn brownstone, genuinely known — not a midtown-only playbook stretched thin.

Taglines

Tagline

Best used for

Arrive in Style

Primary — homepage, app, general marketing

Your City, Chauffeured	Corporate & commuter-facing materials
Precision. Privacy. Presence.	Diplomatic, executive & high-discretion clients
Every Detail, Minded	Wedding & events division

+ Recommended enhancement

A draft brand-kit slogan for the company — built around the idea that the ride is more than a destination — points at a real theme worth keeping: the experience, not just the trip. As written it runs longer and reads more like ad copy than the rest of this table, which favours short, confident phrases over full sentences (this chapter’s own “efficient” characteristic: short sentences, no filler). Worth tightening to that same length before it joins the table above, rather than adopting it as-is.

Voice in practice

SAY

- “Your driver is five minutes out.”
- “We’ve got your flight tracked — no need to call.”
- “Confirmed for 6:00 a.m. See you then.”

AVOID

- “Your transportation solution is being dispatched.”
- “OMG your ride is almost here!! 🚗👏”
- Unnecessary exclamation points, corporate jargon, or forced slang

+ Recommended enhancement

Sample copy, drafted in-voice for reuse across booking and support channels:

Moment	Copy
Booking confirmation	“You’re confirmed for Thursday, 6:00 a.m. — JFK, Terminal 4. Your driver will be waiting at arrivals.”
Flight delay detected	“We saw your flight moved to 9:40 p.m. Your pickup has been updated automatically — nothing you need to do.”
Wedding morning	“Good morning — today’s motorcade is set and confirmed. Your coordinator is on-site from 9:00 a.m.”
Social caption	“Same driver, same standard, every time you ride.”

05

Imagery & Photography

Real chauffeurs, real vehicles, real cities

The camera should find the brand in real life, not stage it.

Style

Authentic over aspirational. RSSkyler's photography features its own chauffeurs, its own fleet and recognisable New York City locations — never generic stock-photo luxury.

Why authenticity

A client who has already ridden with RSSkyler should recognise the car, the street, sometimes even the driver, in the brand's own marketing. That recognition builds more trust than any styled studio shot.

Treatment

Colour grade	A cool, slightly desaturated base with midnight blue in the shadows — never a warm, orange-heavy grade.
Light	Prefer golden hour and blue hour for exterior vehicle shots — the gold-on-midnight relationship, found in the palette itself, found again in the sky.
Composition	Give the vehicle and the city room to breathe; avoid tight, cluttered crops that lose the setting.
People	Candid over posed — a chauffeur opening a door mid-motion reads more true than a static portrait.

Do & don't

USE

- RSSkyler's own fleet and chauffeurs, on real routes
- Recognisable New York landmarks and streetscapes — midtown, the bridges, the outer boroughs
- Natural light, golden or blue hour where possible

AVOID

- Stock photography of unrelated luxury cars or generic models
- Heavy filters, vignettes, or lens flares layered on in post
- Studio-white backgrounds that could belong to any brand

+ Recommended enhancement

Represent the whole city, not just Manhattan — a livery shot outside a Brooklyn brownstone or at LaGuardia carries the same brand weight as one on Park Avenue. Cast and crew in the imagery should reflect who actually rides and who actually drives in New York, not a narrow slice of it.

06

Fleet & Service Positioning

What we drive, and what we're hired to do

Fleet & Service Positioning

Four vehicle classes, five service lines, one consistent standard.

Vehicle classes

Class	Best for
Luxury Sedan	Individual and two-passenger travel — airport transfers, point-to-point, executive pickups
Luxury SUV	Small groups and extra luggage, without stepping up to a full premium class
Premium SUV	The top of the fleet — VIP, diplomatic and flagship corporate bookings
Sprinter Van	Group transport, wedding parties, and event logistics

Services

Airport Transfers	Flight-tracked pickup and drop-off across JFK, LaGuardia and Newark.
Hourly Charters	A car and driver on standby for meetings, appointments, or a flexible day.
Corporate Accounts	Monthly billing, SLAs and a dedicated contact for company travel programs.
Events	Coordinated multi-vehicle logistics for conferences, galas and private functions.
Weddings	A dedicated division — see Chapter 10.

+ Recommended enhancement

“RSSkyler” already carries the word Sky — a naming convention that plays on it would make the fleet easier to sell and remember: Sky Sedan, Sky SUV, Sky SUV Premium, Sky Sprinter. It also opens the door to a simple three-tier loyalty program — Sky Silver, Sky Gold, Sky Platinum — that reuses the palette’s own gold accent as a literal status marker for repeat corporate and high-frequency clients, rather than inventing a separate loyalty visual language.

Digital Experience

Website, app & the booking flow

Digital Experience

Modern booking technology, wrapped around a personal service.

Design principles

Clarity first	Fare, vehicle class and pickup time are visible before the client has to ask.
Few taps to book	The booking flow should feel shorter than describing the trip out loud.
Calm under pressure	Flight delays, driver changes and reroutes are communicated automatically, plainly, ahead of the client noticing something is wrong.
Consistent chrome	Midnight header, white content, gold reserved for the primary action only — on every screen.

Key pages

Page	Job to be done
Home / booking	Get a fare and a confirmed pickup in under a minute
Fleet	Show each vehicle class plainly enough to choose without calling support
Corporate	Explain accounts, billing and SLAs to a travel manager evaluating vendors
Weddings & Events	Feel like its own considered experience — see Chapter 10
Trip tracking	Answer “where is my car” before the client opens the app to ask

+ Recommended enhancement

A few product moves would reinforce the brand promise directly rather than just describe it:

Upfront, fixed pricing	Show the full fare before booking, not an estimate — removes the single biggest trust gap in ground transportation.
Live map tracking	A driver's real-time position, shareable with a third party (an assistant, a family member) without them needing the app.
Corporate platform integration	Sync directly with Concur, TripActions and similar corporate travel tools so approval and expensing happen without a separate login — the detail a travel manager evaluating vendors actually checks for.
Saved profiles	Preferred vehicle class, temperature, and route notes remembered across bookings — discretion and warmth, expressed as a product feature.
SMS handoff at the curb	A simple text-based fallback for guests without the app installed — an international visitor landing at JFK, or a wedding guest who's never booked with RSSkyler before.

Physical Applications

Vehicles, uniforms & stationery

Physical Applications

Where the brand meets the curb, the desk, and the client's hand.

Uniforms

Chauffeur uniforms in charcoal or midnight blue, tailored and understated — never a branded T-shirt treatment. Gold appears only as a thin piping detail or pin, never as fabric colour.

Stationery & print

Item	Treatment
Business cards	Midnight blue background, gold accent
Letterhead	White background, midnight blue header
Brochures	White background, midnight blue headers
Invoices	Clean white, branded header, tabular figures throughout
Packaging	Midnight blue boxes, gold foil accent

+ Recommended enhancement

Extend the same system to the one physical touchpoint most clients actually photograph: the arrivals greeting. A branded tablet or printed card — midnight background, guest name set in Fraunces — replaces the generic paper sign most car services still hand a driver, and turns the very first moment of the trip into a deliberate brand impression rather than an afterthought.

Vehicle livery, pending

This chapter previously specified exact logo placement and minimum size for the vehicle livery — front doors and rear trunk. That detail depends directly on a finished mark and has been held back along with the rest of the logo system (see the note on the Foreword). Once a mark is finalised, this section should be the first one restored, since it is the most visible physical application the brand has.

09

Visual Applications & Templates

Buttons, social templates & email

Visual Applications & Templates

The full Visual Applications Guide, folded into one reference.

Digital UI

Element	Treatment
Primary buttons	Midnight blue background, white text
Secondary buttons	White background, midnight blue border and text
CTAs / highlights	Gold background, midnight text — corrected from white text per the contrast findings in Chapter 2
Links	Midnight blue, underlined on hover
Success states	Green (universal convention)
Error states	Red (universal convention)

Social media templates

Instagram Post — 1080×1080

Format	Spec
Instagram Post	1080×1080 · full-bleed vehicle photo, midnight gradient overlay at base, white headline, gold accent line, gold “Book Now” button
Instagram Story	1080×1920 · full-screen photo, minimal text top or bottom third, “Book Now” sticker
LinkedIn Banner	1584×396 · midnight gradient or cityscape, “Premium Chauffeur Service” headline, “New York City · 24/7” subhead

Email templates

Template	Structure
Booking confirmation	Midnight header · white body with clear booking details · gold “View Booking” button · footer with contact and social links · tone: professional, reassuring, helpful
Promotional	Hero image (vehicle or lifestyle) · clear headline and value proposition · prominent “Book Now” button · footer with contact, social and preferences link

Presentation template

16:9 · white or light-grey background · midnight serif headers · sans body · gold accent lines.

Why this system holds together

Every application in this chapter traces back to the same five colours and two typefaces. That repetition is the point: a client should be able to recognise RSSkyler from a cropped Instagram Story, a business card glimpsed on a desk, or an email footer — on palette and type alone, even before a finished mark is in place.

+ App icon & favicon, pending

App icon and favicon specs depend directly on a finished, production-ready mark and have been held back along with the rest of the logo system (see the note on the Foreword). Once a mark is locked, plan for a 1024×1024 master and a simplified favicon treatment — fine detail rarely survives down to 32px, so the small-size version will likely need to be a deliberately simplified cut of the mark rather than a shrunk copy of the full version.

10

Wedding & Events Division

Its own packages and tone, still unmistakably
RSSkyler

Wedding & Events Division

The most photographed day the brand will ever take part in.

Packages

Tier	Includes
Classic	One Luxury Sedan or SUV for the couple, half-day booking
Signature	Couple's vehicle plus a Sprinter Van for the wedding party, full-day booking, dedicated on-site coordinator
Bespoke	Full motorcade across multiple vehicle classes, multi-day availability for pre-wedding events, a named coordinator from first call to final drop-off

Marketing approach

The division borrows RSSkyler's full visual system — same palette, same typefaces, same mark — but the voice warms further still: more present tense, more sensory detail, less operational language than the core brand uses elsewhere. Photography leans further into golden hour by design, not exception.

+ Recommended enhancement

Give the division a light sub-brand name — RSSkyler Weddings, set in a smaller Fraunces italic beneath the primary name — so it reads as a specialised extension rather than a generic add-on service. Pair it with a referral program for wedding planners and venues across the city: a standing commission or credit for every booking they send, turning the vendors who already influence this decision into an active sales channel rather than a passive listing.

11

Brand Governance

Keeping one standard as the team & the fleet
grow

Brand Governance

A guideline only works if someone is responsible for it.

Approval process

Any new client-facing material — print, digital, vehicle, or uniform — is checked against this guide before production. Anything that departs from it (a new colour, an unlisted visual treatment, an off-voice headline) is routed to the marketing owner for sign-off before it ships.

Asset management

All approved brand assets — photography, templates, and eventually logo files — live in a single centralised digital asset management system — not scattered across individual laptops or email threads. Every agency and print vendor should be pointed to that one source rather than sent a one-off export.

Brand audits

Conduct a standing audit on a regular cadence — vehicle livery, uniforms, stationery, app screens and social templates checked side-by-side against this guide — so drift gets caught at the level of a single vehicle, not an entire fleet.

+ Recommended enhancement

Version control

Name every guideline export with an edition number and date, exactly as this document does — makes it obvious to a vendor whether they're working from the current spec.

Onboarding checklist

A one-page version of Chapters 1 and 5 — mission, values, voice — included in every new chauffeur and dispatcher's first-day materials, so the brand is something the team can act on, not just something marketing maintains.

12

Strategic Recommendations

Business opportunities beyond the visual system

Strategic Recommendations

New territory for the RSSkyler team to evaluate — not yet standing guidance.

The chapters above extend and correct the existing identity system. This closing chapter steps outside pure design into business strategy — ideas worth a conversation with the wider team before any of them become policy.

1. A loyalty program built from the palette already in hand

Three tiers — Sky Silver, Sky Gold, Sky Platinum — give repeat corporate and high-frequency clients a visible status that costs nothing new to design, since it reuses the gold accent already reserved for highlights. Platinum could include the saved-profile and priority-dispatch features noted in Chapter 7.

2. Build a playbook for New York’s recurring demand spikes

The city has a predictable annual rhythm of surge demand that a fleet can plan for instead of scrambling through — UN General Assembly week, Fashion Week, awards season, the Thanksgiving and New Year’s Eve stretch, major conventions at the Javits Center. A standing calendar with pre-booked fleet availability and premium-period pricing turns each of these from an operational scramble into a planned, and more profitable, event.

3. Make trust and safety a stated differentiator, not an assumption

Discretion is already a core value in Chapter 1, but it’s currently implied rather than communicated. A short, plainly written page — chauffeur background-check policy, vehicle inspection cadence, insurance coverage, confidentiality practices for high-profile bookings — would matter directly to the diplomatic and executive segment named in Chapter 1, and costs little to publish once it’s written down.

4. Corporate & concierge partnerships

Hotel concierge desks, wedding planners (Chapter 10), event agencies, and corporate travel managers are already positioned to refer clients before those clients ever search independently. A standing referral or commission structure, with a simple partner-facing one-pager built from this guide's own templates, turns each of them into a low-cost acquisition channel.

5. A sustainability position, stated honestly

Corporate accounts increasingly weigh vendor sustainability in procurement decisions. If any portion of the fleet is hybrid or electric, or could be, that's worth a dedicated line in Chapter 6 rather than silence. If it isn't yet, a stated timeline is more credible than an unstated aspiration.
